Cummings Booms McAdoo to Carry Party Gauntlet in Next Campaign

LABOR LEADERS IN

Former Chairman Declares Republicans Trying to Hide Tribulations

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—More than 300 advocates of the candidacy of William Gibbs McAdoo for the Democratic nomination for the presidency gathered here today to see Judge David Ladd Roswell of Ohio open the conference to decide whether or not the Teapot Dome disclosures have made Mr. McAdoo unfit to continue as a presidential candidate.

Many women were noted in the gathering that listened to the key note speech by Homer Cummings of Connecticut, former chairman of the Democratic national committee. Quite a number of railroad labor men were also seen among those present including Daniel Ryan, of the carmen's union, President Shepard of the Railway Conductors' union, and a number of lesser labor lights.

Cummings Calls Conference. The conference was called, Mr. Cummings said at the opening of the session, "not in behalf of the fortunes of an individual, but to consider the fate of the cause of liberalism."

"Those who control the Republican party," continued Mr. Cummings, "in a desperate attempt to divert attention from their own tribulations are striving to implicate Democrats in the Teapot Dome scandal, but no one whose name is mentioned in connection with the Democratic presidential nomination has been touched by the revelations."

"A strenuous attempt has been made to discredit Mr. McAdoo but it is known here anywhere that Mr. McAdoo had no connection directly or indirectly with these scandals."

"A mere statement of the situation reveals the absurdity of the question that there has been any impairment of his strength as a candidate."

"The forces of liberalism have gathered around Mr. McAdoo to continue the struggle which began in 1915 to free American institutions from the thralldom of special privilege."

Victim of Chase of Prohibition Agent In Serious Condition

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Senator Greene of Vermont, victim of a prohibition enforcement chase within the shadow of the capitol, remained in a serious condition this morning, no change having been observed during the night.

The bullet that hit him over the left eye Friday night while he was passing an alley in which two men in an automobile were being pursued by prohibition enforcement officers did not penetrate the skull. It drove a bone splinter into the brain, however, necessitating a delicate operation. He showed some improvement yesterday but his physicians described his condition as still serious. He was resting today as comfortably as could be expected.

STALL SUGGESTS TRAFFIC BOOSTS

Motor Club President Would Build up Rural Roads in County

N. B. Stall, president of the Motor club, after a week among the schools of the county, says the roads are in anything but good shape for traffic and is strongly convinced of the need of an extensive program for Pontotoc county.

Mr. Stall says the Motor club will hold a meeting about March 1 to make plans for the coming season. Among other things the matter of connecting the road south of Byrd's Mill with the Tishomingo highway and with some highway to the north via the new Canadian bridge will come up for discussion. The idea is to make this a national highway and mark it. Whether it will leave Ada via Mississippi avenue or South Townsend is to be determined.

It is planned to invite the state highway commissioner to the meeting of the club and have him fully explain the manner in which the funds collected under the increased gasoline tax bill will be used and how much Pontotoc county will also get. Other matters will also be taken up with him and everything possible be done for road improvement.

The Motor club was organized to assist the county commissioners in handling road problems and has been quite active during the past three or four years.

Mr. Stall says the free tourist camp ground at Ada is listed on all the directories issued by the various national clubs and with the opening of the Canadian bridge it is believed that many tourists will come this way.

HOUSE CONTINUES ON FATE OF WHITEHURST

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 18.—The Oklahoma house of representatives continued its discussion today of committee recommendations for the impeachment of John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture. There were hopes that a vote might be reached before night.

Representative Stovall of Choctaw county defended Whitehurst for an hour. Representative Beum of Ellis assailed Whitehurst asking: "If John is in earnest when he asks the house to send charges to the senate, why is the entire camp on the job in the lobbies trying to save his head?"

Beum asserted that the state "has been robbed of $175,000 and John is an ignoramus if he did not know of the leakage."

Representative Wrenn was speaking when the house recessed for lunch.

LEGION MEMBERS RENEW BONUS DRIVE

Treasury Officials Accused of Juggling Figures; Owsley Predict Success

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—American Legion members were pushing their plan for an ex-service men's bonus today with renewed vigor after a sensational spurt last night in which the treasury department was accused of "juggling" its estimates against the project and the secretary was charged with "misleading the late President Harding and President Coolidge."

The charge of "juggling" was made by Col. Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, at a bonus meeting. He said a "high treasury official" had admitted the alleged manipulation of the figures to him and had confessed the estimates were greatly increased each time congress requested a revision, "because it was felt necessary at the treasury department to show stronger and stronger arguments against the bonus each time it came up."

Representative Benjamin L. Fairchild, Republican, New York, said Secretary Mellon "misled" Mr. Harding in anticipating a $600,000,000 deficit when events proved there was a $300,000,000 surplus in the treasury. This $900,000,000 difference, Mr. Fairchild asserted, "prevented Mr. Harding perhaps more than any other thing from signing the bonus bill."

Alvin Owsley, former national commander of the Legion, told his hearers the bonus would pass the house by a 5 to 1 vote and get a majority in the senate, "finally passing over the veto of Calvin Coolidge."

Boisterous Boy Becomes British Cabinet Member

(By the Associated Press) NORTHAMPTON, Eng.—Frederick Owen Roberts, Pensioners Minister in the Labor Cabinet, was the "noisiest of four sons," his mother said recently to an Evening News representative, and developed an early liking for music. But as he tried to extract this from a cornet he became very unpopular in the house and had to be sent down to the garden to practise. Later he was entrusted with a kettle-drum in the local village band, and on arriving at years of greater discretion young Roberts adopted the violin.

When 14 years of age young Roberts started work in a newspaper office as compositor, and spent 25 years at the linotype machines before taking up trade unionism as a wholetime occupation. Roberts' mother is postmistress at the East Haddon postoffice, and received the news of his appointment as minister of pensions over the telephone.

JUDGE SLAIN BY COURT DEFENDANT

Man Arraigned in Court Kills Judge Before Taking Own Life

(By the Associated Press)

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 18.—William M. Morning, veteran district judge, was shot and killed early today in his court room by Wallace G. Wallick who in turn shot and killed himself. The judge was shot through the heart.

Wallick, 50 years old, was a well digger and lived in Belmont, a suburb of Lincoln. "Do you want an attorney?" Judge Morning asked the defendant when his case was called this morning.

"No man can make me pay," Wallick cried as he pulled his gun and fired four shots at his wife, who was suing for separate maintenance, her attorney, the judge and himself. The last two took effect.

Judge Morning's head dropped to one side but he braced himself and walked down from his chair, court attaches helping him into his chamber where he died in a few minutes.

DEMOCRATS WILL SUPPORT GARNER

Republicans in Congress Attempted to Get Together On Income Tax Reduction

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—House republican leaders determined Sunday to boost the proposed maximum surtax rate in the revenue bill to 37 1-2 per cent in an effort to break the deadlock in negotiations with the insurgents, who hold the balance of power on the income rate schedules which will be taken up Tuesday.

The republicans previously had receded from the Mellon rate of 25 per cent, carried in the bill, and had centered on 35 per cent in an effort to unite the party against the democratic stand for a 44 per cent maximum. The 35 per cent rate, leaders said, would win 208 republican votes, ten less than a majority. Two conferences Saturday with the insurgent group, however, failed to bring an agreement, the organization led by Representatives Frear and Nelson, Wisconsin, holding out for a 40 per cent surtax rate and a reduction of 50 per cent in the normal income taxes. The Mellon rates call for a 25 per cent reduction in the normal taxes.

Republicans won't consent to the added normal tax reductions, which are the same as those proposed by the democrats, because treasury estimates had shown such a cut would reduce revenue receipts below the estimated surplus on which tax revision is to be based. Representative Begg, republican, Ohio, who conducted a poll of the republican delegations as to their views on the income tax schedule, said Sunday at least four of the insurgent group, which he declared numbered ten votes, must be won over in the conference which will be resumed Monday, if the republicans expect to defeat the democratic plan.

Democrats Bound By Caucus. Democrats are bound by a party caucus vote to support the income rate schedules advanced by Representative Garner, Texas, and their leaders predict all but a few of the 207 members in the house will be present when the vote is taken. General debate on the measure will close tomorrow at 4 o'clock and agreement. Chairman Green of the ways and means committee in charge of the bill for the majority and Representative Garner, leading the democratic fight, expect to start the reading of the measure immediately thereafter. The first part of the bill, over which practically no differences have developed, may be finished before Tuesday. At that time the income rates will be taken up for amendment.

HENRY COLLINS' MOTHER BURIED AT THE OLD HOME

J. Henry Collins, manager of the P. B. Wilson Company, has just returned from Lewisburg, Mississippi, where he went to attend the funeral of his mother.

Mrs. Collins was 90 years of age at the time of her death, and was active and her mind clear until the last. Mr. Collins reached her bedside just before the end came and after she had lost consciousness. He had visited her, however, only a fortnight before and had spent several days with her. A great concourse of friends in Mississippi and Tennessee attended the funeral which was held last Thursday at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Collins' father died about nine years ago, at the advanced age of almost 92 years.

Scores of friends of Mr. Collins sympathize with him in his bereavement.

Grade crossings are unknown in Great Britain.

COOLIDGE ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF HIS NAVY CHIEF

Even Denby's Friends Urged Coolidge Not to Embarrass Administration

DEFENDS ACTIONS

Chairman Lenroot Denies Sensational Rumors, Saying No Developments

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Secretary Denby has resigned and will retire from the cabinet March 10.

He informed President Coolidge today that in view of his connection with the oil leases he did not desire to embarrass further the administration by remaining a member of it.

The president in a letter accepting the resignation praised the official record of his retiring navy secretary and said he acceded to the request with regret.

Theodore Roosevelt, who as assistant secretary under Mr. Denby, had a part in drafting the order which transferred the naval reserves from the navy to the interior department, conferred with the president and announced later he did not expect to resign. There was no indication that Mr. Coolidge had given thought to a successor to Mr. Denby but it appeared likely that one would be selected without delay.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Edwin Denby has resigned as secretary of the navy and his resignation has been accepted.

After repeatedly declaring that he never would quit the cabinet under fire of those who have criticized his part in the oil leasing program, the secretary notified President Coolidge this morning that he was ready to step out.

His decision followed a telephone consultation between the president and Mr. Denby in which all the latest aspects of the situation were talked over in the light of information passed on to the White House by Republican leaders in the senate.

Recently a number of the secretary's friends also have been consulted by Mr. Coolidge and they are understood to have advised the president that they fully understood the embarrassment that would result in retaining Mr. Denby in the cabinet while the oil annulment suits were in progress. Not only was he a party to the oil leasing, having affixed his signature along with that of Albert B. Fall, but repeatedly defended his part in the proceedings and has declared publicly since the present controversy arose that he believed the contracts legal and would be willing to pursue the same course again.

It has been pointed out to the president that it might appear inconsistent to have a member of the administration holding these views remain in office while the administration itself through its counsel was moving in the courts to annul the leases on the ground that they were made without authority of law.

The first steps in these legal proceedings, in injunction suits to prevent further work on the Teapot Dome and California reserves are expected immediately after the senate completes confirmation of the oil counsel, probably today.

For the same reason there has been reports that Theodore Roosevelt also would retire as assistant secretary under Mr. Denby. Mr. Roosevelt also had a hand in framing the oil leases.

No Sensational Developments

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Chairman Lenroot denied today a widely published story that sensational developments had led to the calling of a meeting of the senate oil committee.

"The chairman said there had been no change in the committee's plan and so far as he knew the situation remained just where it was when the ten-day recess was taken last Friday."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—It is expected that the effective date of Secretary Denby's resignation will be March 10.

The retirement of the navy secretary also revived rumors that the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty would follow within a few days. A resolution relating to the resignation of Mr. Denby is pending in the senate and its sponsors are pressing for quick action.

The resolution in which the president was advised to ask Secretary Denby to leave the cabinet was adopted February 11 with the Republican leaders opposing it but with 10 Republicans voting in its support. The vote was 47 to 34.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

TAX EXEMPTION FARCE MUST END

Will Congress adopt Secretary Mellon's program for tax reduction which includes a reduction in income tax and the doing away with future issues of tax-exempt bonds?

The President and the people are in favor of tax reduction. The politicians through their blocs and parties in Congress, are pulling and hauling to try to gain personal prestige through delays and log rolling in the tax reduction program.

A constitutional amendment to do away with tax exempt securities passed House of Representatives last winter but died at expiration of Congress. It is now necessary to pass it again. This takes valuable time and shows waste of expense resulting where public officials play politics instead of expediting the business of the nation.

At the present time it is estimated that the income from approximately $30,000,000,000 in capital invested in government tax-exempt securities, escapes all forms of taxation. The fact that cities, counties, states and nation can issue tax-exempt bonds drawing a low rate of interest has caused a reckless increase in public debt and has furnished the loophole for billions of dollars to escape taxation.

After an amendment to the United States constitution is passed permitting the taxation of income from future issues of public bonds, it will be necessary for legislatures of the various states to ratify the measure. For the reason, quick action in Congress is essential in order that state legislatures which are in session or which will be in session in the near future may be able to act on the measure and put an end to the present obsolete system which is an invitation for the reckless piling up of debt on one hand and lawful tax dodging on the other hand.

It would seem as if Republicans, Democrats and Progressives would be on common ground when it comes to a measure of this kind which would assure in the future that every person would pay his share of income tax. Is it not possible for Congress to cut out politics and get down to business on this measure?—Exchange.

It is announced that a special farm census is to be taken next year by the department of commerce. The figures of the 1920 census were far from accurate, due partly to the fact that on many items the farmers had to make rough guesses at the answers to the questions and partly to the change of tenants. Under the instructions of the census bureau an enumerator was required to find out how much was grown on the particular farm occupied at the time by the person enumerated, and not how much and what kind of stuff the farmer might have produced himself the year before. Since many changes had taken place before the census was taken it was not to be supposed that a new tenant would know what had been raised on a farm by his predecessor, hence it was up to the enumerator to estimate as well as he could what that farm had produced. Under such a system the figures were farm from accurate.

Reports of the operations of the Panama Canal for the past year indicate that it is coming into its own. More than 5,000 vessels passed through it during the year and they paid more than $22,000,000 for the service. Both the number of vessels and the receipts more than doubled the figures for the previous year. The canal cost a large sum of money but the world needed it and it meant much to the United States as was demonstrated during the World war. Times have changed since the famous trip of the Oregon around Cape Horn in 1898 when the United States was at war with Spain and needed this splendid vessel on this side of the continent.

In the early days of railroading it is related that the town of Frederick, Maryland, raised a bonus of $10,000 which was offered the Baltimore & Ohio railroad if it would not build to that place. However, it was not long until other places grasped the possibilities of the railroads and were paying big bonuses to induce them to build and the practice has prevailed to this good day. Many a village lost its opportunity to become a city by refusing to offer inducements to a railroad to come in.

The statements of the Ada banks make an excellent showing in the face of existing conditions. Not only are the deposits holding up well, being well on towards $3,000,000, but the large available cash resources held by all three banks is ample evidence that they are prepared to render good service during the coming year.

When the new federal judge is appointed for Oklahoma a number of additional towns will be given terms of court. In this connection Ada should be right on the job and make every possible effort to help put over the McKeown bill designating Ada as a federal court town.

INCOME TAX CONFUSION

There are comparatively few people in the country who willfully make false income tax returns. Most business men realize the necessity of the tax and pay it as a matter of patriotic duty, not because it is a pleasant thing to do. Indeed, they are anxious to pay the bill assessed against them and have it over with, but the present system of making returns is so complicated, and receives so many different interpretations, that no man knows when he will be accused of an attempt to defraud the Government. Even the income tax return blanks for men of small saary partake of the nature of a Chinese puzzle, while the blank furnished corporations and men of large affairs is so intricate that no two alleged experts will get the same results.

The result of the incompetency, or willful maliciousness on the part of the lawyers who designed the income tax blanks, has been a growing dissatisfaction with the system. Men who are conscious of the fact that an income tax, when equitably assessed, is the best form of taxation, have become so exasperated with the system now in vogue that they would be willing to abandon it altogether.

The blanks for making returns of income tax to be paid are so complicated, so divided up into this and that classification, divisions and reference notes, that any person out of the straight salary class must employ costly experts, who sometimes require weeks to complete their work, in order to make a preliminary statement. Expensive systems of book keeping must be adopted and extra help employed. After all this has been done at a cost exceeding the amount of tax, and returns are made, the taxpayer is not allowed to forget the matter and turn his attention to other things. No matter to what expense and trouble he has gone in order to do the right thing by the Government, his place of business is sure to be visited by alleged Government experts, who after monopolizing the time of the office for several days, report that several thousand dollars are due, and notice is issued to come across instantly or suffer the penalty. Instances of this kind are too numerous to mention. They have occurred in every county in the United States and will continue to occur just so long as the Government insists on using blanks so complicated and intricate that no two men can understand them alike.

If there is any reason for not devising a set of return blanks of so simple a nature that a business man's own book keeper cannot properly fill them out, Government officials have failed to mention it. As it now stands, there are almost as many persons connected with the revenue department as there are citizens who pay the taxes, while the cost of collection is many times what it should be under a less complicated system.

If our congressmen and senators really want to do something to popularize themselves with the voters of the country, let them suggest ways and means of reducing the worry and cost of making income tax returns. Income tax payers the country over are tired of being held up as tax dodgers by incompetent Government agents, especially when they have spent their money in an earnest effort to comply with the provisions of the law.—Farm and Ranch.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS.

Every single person whose net income for the year 1923 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more, and every married couple (living together) whose net income was $2,000 or more or whose gross income was $5000 or more, must file an income-tax return.

Broadly speaking gross income is all income received by the taxpayer during the year from salary or wages, business, trade, profession or vocation, dealing in property, interest, rent, or dividends, or from the transaction of any business carried on for profit. Net income is gross income, less certain specified deductions for business expenses, bad debts, taxes, etc.

The exemptions are $1,000 for single persons, $25,000 for married persons (living together) whose net income for 1923 was $5,000 or less, and $2,000 for married couples whose net income was in excess of $5,000. An additional credit of $400 is allowed for each person (other than husband and wife) dependent upon the taxpayer for chief support if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because physically or mentally defective.

The normal tax is 4 percent on the first $4,000 of net income in excess of the exemptions and credits and 8 percent on the remaining net income.

Great Britain's government is a monarchy in form but in reality the king is mainly a figurehead who keeps up all the ancient forms. Among these he opens parliament with an address but the speech is not his own. It is prepared for him by the prime minister and it reflects the views of the cabinet then in power and not necessarily those of the king. Naturally when a cabinet change occurs the tenor of the king's opening address also changes, hence in course of his reign the king is placed in the attitude of frequently contradicting himself. However, no one is misled by that fact, accepting the whole thing as a matter of course. The president of the United States does not hold his job for life, as does the king, but his powers are real. When it comes to his message or address to congress he is presenting his own views and is held responsible accordingly.

Probably the producers of the moving picture, "The Covered Wagon" had no thought that it might get them into trouble, but such is the case. It appears that a daughter of Jim Bridgers, one of the earliest pioneers of the Rocky Mountain region, is still living and is greatly offended by the portrayal of her father in the play. She asks for a million damages. The book from which the drama was written was published two or three years ago and had evidently passed unnoticed by the daughter of Bridgers. The incident serves to remind the country that the settlement of the West and Northwest is not a matter of ancient history.

A staff correspondent of the Tulsa Tribune says that the Haskell presidential boom in Oklahoma is languishing and bids fair to wither away before long. He predicts that McAdoo will get the delegation to the national convention.

If there is anything in Easter having an effect on the weather, we shall have a late spring. Easter comes on April 20, this year.

Japan Orders cut in Lavish Entertainment by Diplomats

(By the Associated Press)
TOKIO, Japan.—There will be less entertaining by Japanese diplomats at home and abroad in the future.

The finance department has insisted on a reduction of the expenditure of the foreign office as well as other departments of the government and to do this the foreign minister has ordered that dinners and banquets in Tokio and in foreign capitals be abandoned and that a reduction be made in grants to officials on their retirement, traveling expenses, secret service, international conference expenses, commercial attaches, investigations and the enforcement of The Hague and Versailles peace conference treaties.

This will save, it is estimated, over a million yen yearly.

QUERY ANSWERED

By A. W. PEACH

(© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

STETSON opened the door and stared with surprise at the small person he saw there.

"Does Mr. George Hanley live here?" her sweet, tired voice asked.

"Why—er—no," he answered, "but come in out of this night rain."

She stepped inside and explained hesitatingly that she was looking for a friend, that she had gone to the address he had given her, but had not found him, that she remembered seeing on one of the letters he had written this address, and in hope of finding him she had come here.

"But there is no one of that name here. This is Mrs. Wilson's boarding house," he went on; "but I can help you, perhaps, if you will describe him."

"I met him last summer in the village where I live. He is tall, has blue eyes and curly hair, and is quite—quite handsome!"

Stetson stared at her; then as suddenly he asked her to sit down for a moment. He hurried to Mrs. Wilson's room.

"Mother" (such was her name among her little boarding family) "there is a little lost girl downstairs. Won't you go down and see what you can do for her?"

Mrs. Wilson, with quick interest, left him and he went up another flight, knocked on a door and stepped in. A tall, blue-eyed man greeted him.

Stetson eyed him sharply. "There's a girl downstairs hunting for a young man she described as you look. She has come from some upstate village. Know anything about her?" The man's face changed and Stetson went on: "Your name as I know it is John Hanley; she says she wants George Hanley."

Beeson sighed. "I'm guilty as the devil, Don. I was out on a lark with some pals, met her at a village dance, flirted with her. She heard the fellows call me Hanley, but I told her my name was George. Went to see her a number of times, and she fell in love head over heels. I didn't think she'd get serious. Gave her a fake address, thought she'd write, not get a reply and give up. How'd she find me?" Stetson told him, and he sighed again. "Why does a girl have to be so serious?"

Downstairs Mother Wilson had prepared a warm lunch, and made the dark-eyed girl change her wet garments.

The little group chatted together, and Stetson discovered that her name was Ruth Hargrave and that her smile revealed even, white teeth that made her still prettier. He came to the conclusion that it ought not to be a difficult stunt to fall in love with her.

But George Hanley did not come down and Stetson finally went up, to be told by a maid that she saw him go out the back way. "The beastly coward!" Stetson thought in anger. "He's a good fellow in some ways, but his moral sense is minus!"

On his way down he planned the next move, which was evident when he explained to the wondering girl that he had been mistaken—her friend was not in his room.

George did not appear the next morning, and Stetson was at a loss what to do. He ended by spending the day with the girl in a trip about the city. When he returned life had changed for him, he admitted a bit grimly. Her dark head at his shoulder, the quick, shy uplift of her eyes when amused at his comment, her grave, sweet voice, and more than all, the clear transparency of her character—all these, and more appealed to him as no other girl ever appealed.

George had not appeared at evening, and Stetson, somewhat against his desires, went in search of him. Tracing him through his cronies, he found him at last and convinced him that there was one thing for him to do—to return and straighten things out.

George returned with him. Stetson did not wait to see the outcome, but when George went to his room some time afterward Stetson followed him.

"Fix it up? Sure!" George replied to his question. "Say, but she is a pretty thing, isn't she? I'm going to take her out tomorrow for a good time. Nothing like having a way with the girls, deacon."

Late on the evening of the next day Stetson met her on the stairs, winsome and appealing in a white dress, after her evening with George.

He nodded and started to go by. She caught his arm, and her voice was wistful as she spoke. "Please don't look at me that way. I know how you feel after—after his deception; but you have been so good to me!"

"George seems to think—"

"He thinks that he is to me what he thought he was at home. He isn't. He flirted with me then; I've been flirting with him today, and I'm ashamed of myself; but I did want to give him a dose of his own medicine. I really am not as simple as I look!"

Stetson laughed. "Little girl, I don't blame you a bit. I'm glad to see your spunk. I only wish from the bottom of my heart that you would stay a little longer, so that I—"

"I—might, if you want me to," she answered, fearfully.

He caught both of her small hands in his. "It's a bargain, then!" he said with vehemence; and as she raised her dark eyes, luminous now with a soft light, he longed to draw her to him, but decided that that and other things could wait.

Unusual Departure in American Salesmanship Is Inaugurated by Frederick B. Patterson

S.S. ORDUNA LEAVING NEW YORK FOR BERMUDA

Five hundred and fifty super salesmen sailed for Bermuda on the S. S. Orduna, with all expenses paid, as a reward of "100 point" efficiency. The salesmen assembled in New York from every point in the United States for an educational voyage provided free by Frederick B. Patterson, President of the National Cash Register Company, as the company's reward to salesmen who had attained 100 point efficiency within the year.

This is the first time in the history of the United States that such a reward for salesmanship was made. Mr. Patterson does not regard the trip as an "outing" for his salesmen, but as an educational trip with broadening effects. The fact that the five hundred crack salesmen will spend a week or ten days together in exchanging ideas and will take an ocean voyage to a foreign country can't help, Mr. Patterson holds, but have a beneficial effect on every man, not only physically but in results for the next year.

"Naturally, we expect this trip to result profitably to the company in increased sales," said Mr. Patterson. "It has already done so. The offer to take our '100-point' salesmen on the trip inspired all to greater effort, and increased sales resulted. It develops increased enthusiasm and loyalty. Taking the men out of the country gives them new perspective which can't help but be profitable. With improved physical condition as a result of the sea voyage, the men return with increased zest that gives new life to our entire sales force."

ALASKAN RESERVES UNDER INVESTIGATION

Denby and Fall Operations in North to be Subject For Senators to Study

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—While the senate oil investigation halted, senate progressives today began to push an investigation into the administration of the Alaskan naval coal reserves by Secretary of the Navy Denby and former Secretary of the Interior Fall.

A resolution introduced in the senate yesterday by Senator La Follette calling on Secretary of the Interior Work for all documents pertaining to transfer of jurisdiction of the reserve from Denby to Fall in 1922 was the initial step in the drive.

La Follette introduced his measure after John E. Ballaine, Alaskan railroad contractor had submitted to President Coolidge a long letter in which he charged that negotiations were opened shortly after the transfer for leasing the coal reserves to private operators in a manner similar to that by which the naval oil reserves were disposed of by Denby and Fall.

Walsh Not to Be Diverted. Presidential politics will not be allowed to defeat or hamper the senate Teapot Dome inquiry, Senator Walsh, Montana, served notice today upon his friends.

Expressing his appreciation of the efforts of Georgia and Nebraska Democrats who offered to circulate his name in those states as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president Walsh firmly declined the offer.

Walsh feels that to have himself put forward at this time as a candidate for political honors would cause a serious reflection. In the minds of many, on the singleness of his purpose in the Teapot Dome inquiry.

Halt in Inquiry. Teapot Dome investigations today paused to decide the direction and scope of their further inquiry into leasing of naval oil reserves.

Hearings have been adjourned until February 25 when the $1,000,000 "slush fund" reported to have been used here will be gone into.

Edward B. McLean, millionaire Washington publisher, who is coming up from Palm Beach, was notified that he need not appear to answer his subpoena at present. McLean was to be asked about the millionnaire fund.

No congressional investigating committee in many years has produced such a variety of sensations with such rapidity as this committee has. The evidence thus far presented makes a mountain of documents.

Even committee members are a little confused at time in trying to keep clear in their minds just what the committee has developed. Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene presidential counsel to prosecute the oil scandal were expected to be confirmed today by the senate so that the wheels of court action may be started immediately. The oil investigating committee late yesterday unanimously accepted Roberts and voted 10 to 3 in favor of Pomerene. Senators Walsh, Dill and Adams dissented on Pomerene.

As soon as the nominations are accepted formally by the senate both can proceed with the authority of congress to file an injunction for cancellation of the leases.

May Call Grand Jury.

Summoning of a grand jury to consider criminal action is also being considered. Pomerene and Roberts conferred this morning regarding the steps to be taken.

It was indicated that court action would begin from 24 to 48 hours after the nominations are confirmed. The counsel refused to indicate details of their first steps pending senate action.

GREAT RESEARCH FOR FLYNN SPECTACLE

Historically correct in every detail, was the watchword of Emmott Flynn and the Golden studios in "In The Palace of the King," the coming attraction at the American theatre for two days.

A research staff consisting of more than a dozen persons worked two weeks compiling data upon every possible phase of life in Spain during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Photographs of Spanish buildings and palaces, reproductions of old paintings and book illustrations were called upon during preparation for "In The Palace of the King," which was taken from F. Marion Crawford's novel of that name.

Scenes of photographs were made from the Album Historique by Alfred Parmentier showing drawings of castles, courtyards and kings. The photographs were used in designing scenes and costumes.

Research work on the picture, conducted by Ernest Lavisse, was carried to art museums and royal art collections in Madrid, Paris, Florence and Vienna.

A large amount of the data was taken from the Escorial, or memorial palace built by King Philip II, around whom "In The Palace of the King" centers.

VETERAN OF MANY WARS IS WYOMING HOMESTEADER

(By the Associated Press) SHERIDAN, Wyo., Feb. 16.—Nick Wildt, a native of Siberia, has entered a reposeful phase of an adventurous career by taking up a homestead on a Wyoming ranch.

Wildt was drafted into the Russian army at the tender age of 9. At 17 he was a Cossack trooper. He fought at Port Arthur and in three other major engagements of the Russo-Japanese war. In 1903 he was assigned to the late Czar's personal bodyguard, and remained in this service in St. Petersburg for six years. In August, 1914, he took part in the first battle of the Russo-German war on the eastern front.

Wildt was wounded at Posen and taken prisoner, but finally escaped from Hamburg on a British submarine. He made his way to the United States in 1915, but returned to France with the American army two years later. He fought in six more engagements and was wounded as many times.

Wildt returned recently from Honolulu, where he completed his enlistment in the American army. He wears eight decorations, several of them being bestowed by the Czar.

PADEREWSKI GAVE ALL TO POLAND

Former Premier Now Trying To Make New Fortune At Piano

(By the Associated Press)

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 18.—Ignace Paderewski, former premier of Poland and world famous musician, lost a fortune of more than a million dollars while guiding the destinies of his native land, he said, and now in the autumn of life he is attempting to amass another fortune.

Paderewski is here today for a concert. He is one of the world's most famous piano players and he expects to make his second fortune as he did the first—through his concerts.

"Why not," he asked, "The people are willing to pay the price I ask and if I can continue with the tours I have planned, I will have another million before many years."

Paderewski was premier to Poland in 1919, at a time when that little nation was making a desperate fight to keep the Russian hordes from pouring across the border and overrunning the land. It was his patriotism that caused the famous musician to desert his beloved piano, turn his back on his audiences and throw himself into the fight to save his nation. He turned his entire personal fortune over to the government.

"I do not begrudge what I did," Paderewski said, "I believe any true patriot would have done the same thing. Our armies needed money and I, at that time, was one of the few who could provide the funds."

The musician does not expect to take office with his native government again, but he is vitally interested in its future, he declared. The little nation is building itself rapidly and soon will be one of the most stable countries of the world, Paderewski said.

"I did the best I knew while premier, a position at that time which was the most important of the government," the pianist declared, "and I believe I did well my share of duty to my native land."

When he resigned as premier in 1920, Paderewski did not expect to return to the concert stage. Not long afterwards, however, so great were the pleas for his return that he decided he would again appear around the world and attempt to rebuild his crumbling fortunes.

After this year's tour Paderewski will return to his native land where he has a large estate and devote more time as advisor to his land, but not officially, he said.

Bulgarian Divorces Decrease

SOFIA, —Government statistics show a steady decrease in divorce from the high peak reached during and just after the World War. The decrease for 1922 was 40 per cent. Marriage is a church function in Bulgaria, but after the church grant a divorce the courts adjudicate questions affecting property, alimony and custody of children. There is no civil marriage in Bulgaria.

Immediately after it was sent to the White House, Mr. Coolidge issued a statement declaring that such questions lay wholly within the province of the executive but adding: "The president is responsible to the people for his conduct relating to the retention or dismissal of public officials. I assume that responsibility and the people may be assured that as soon as I can be advised of all the facts that I shall act to protect the public interests."

"I do not purpose to sacrifice any innocent man for my own welfare, nor do I purpose to retain in office any guilty man for my own welfare. I shall try to maintain the functions of the government unimpaired and act upon evidence and the law as I find it."

BIRTHDATE OF PI KAPPA SIGMA CHAPTER OBSERVED

Two years ago on Feb. 17, Nu chapter of Pi Kappa Sigma was installed at East Central State Teachers College.

Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Duncan, the members of Pi Kappa Sigma were delightfully entertained by the executive committee in honor of the second birthday of Nu chapter.

The sorority colors, turquoise blue and gold, and Geo. Washington suggestions were carried out. Bridge was played until time came to unwrap the birthday gifts for the sorority room. Miss Thelma Roberts, president of the active chapter unwrapped and presented the gifts.

The birthday cake was cut and served by Mrs. O. A. Tunnel, jr., president of the Ada Alumni chapter. The two candles were blown out and wish made by the oldest member and youngest member. They were Misses Ruby West and Pearl Montgomery, respectively. Blue and gold pen quills were given as favors.

Federated Music Clubs

The study of Hayden was a very entertaining one due to the large number of his works which were played. The representative Haydn numbers played in the Juvenile meeting were:

Aurietta in Eb, Aurietta in A.—Pauline Robinson. Andante Grazioso, Allegro.—Martha King Wagner.

Air from Haydn Symphony.—Mary McKinley and Elizabeth Logsdon.

Cypre Rhondo.—Sarah Hale. Austrian National Hymn.—Ruth Coon and Mary Eloise Green.

A report of Haydn's life by Margaret Meaders revealed the astounding accomplishments of Haydn as a boy.

A record of the "Minuet from the 'Surprise Symphony'" was added to the collection which is being used in the memory contest work. The phase of the work in itself makes the study worth while.

The Junior club brought out the more difficult Haydn works:

Allegro, Eb major Sonata.—Abbie Lewis. Allegro, Ab major Sonata.—Nelle Chapman.

Allegro D major Sonata.—Katherine Manville.

Two movements from the "Surprise Symphony", Andante Contabile, Vivace, and Minuet (Allegro Molto Minuetto) were played on the victrola.

An account of Haydn's life, works, characteristics, and the conditions under which he worked, given by Mary Belle Harvey completed a most interesting meeting.

Mozart is the fourth composer to be studied.

MISS TALMADGE TO PLAY SERIOUS ROLES

Beginning with her recently released photoplay, "The Dangerous Maid," a 17th century comedy-romance of old England, Constance Talmadge's future stories will all be more dramatic in type.

"The Dangerous Maid," a First National picture, will open at the McSwain theatre today.

In the cast, besides Constance Talmadge, are, Conway Tearle, Morgan Wallace, Tully Marshall, Marjorie Daw, Charles Gerrard, Lou Morrison, Otto Mattiesen, Wilson Hummel, Kenneth Gibson, Ann May, Kate Price, Thomas Hicketts, Phillip Dunham, Jack Dillon and Ray Hal-lor.

The story of "The Dangerous Maid" is laid in the turbulent times when the Duke of Monmouth rebelled against King James II of England. Constance Talmadge has the role of a madcap little rebel who dons a cavalier's sword and costume and engages in a thrilling series of adventures with the officers of the king.

The story gives Constance her first opportunity to play a dramatic role, and the picture, although it contains many humorous situations, is replete with romance and love interest, and is embellished with superb sets.

DOCTORS TO DISCUSS FAKE DIPLOMA MILLS

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO.—Protection of the public against incompetent physicians, and corrective measures concerning the alleged sale of medical diplomas and irregularities in state licensing boards, are among the principal topics for discussion at the congress on medical education, medical licensing, public health and hospitals, to be held here March 3-5. The congress is sponsored by the American Medical Association.

Medical education in America and Europe between 1909 and 1924 will be reviewed by Abraham Flexner, secretary of the general educational board, New York, who, in 1909, attracted wide attention when he presented his report on medical education up to that time. Medical education and culture and public benefits from recent improvements, are subjects to be handled by Dean Stephen Rushmore of Tufts, and Dr. Henry S. Dritchett, president, Carnegie Foundation for Teaching, New York.

The sessions on March 4 will be devoted particularly to the problem of protecting the public against incompetent physicians.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

PEACE I LEAVE WITH YOU, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be a afraid.—John 14:27.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE

Sunday's Oklahoman carries a page story of E. S. Bronson, one of the owners of the El Reno American and secretary of the Oklahoma Press Association for the past 17 years. The story in question was highly complimentary to Mr. Bronson, but there was not a word in it that he does not more than merit.

The newspaper fraternity of this state is under a debt of deep obligation to Mr. Bronson because of his untiring zeal for the profession. Having served in an official capacity with him one year we had the opportunity to see something of the amount and results of his work which he has performed because of his loyalty to the members of the newspaper fraternity.

However, it is not alone his services to the newspaper profession that commends him to the citizenship of the state. He is man of progressive ideas and has done much in the way of public work for his community and the state as a whole. The News hopes he will be spared many years longer to continue his work and give good counsel where it is needed.

The locomotive engineers of the United States have branched out into a line that may have great bearing on the future of American industry. The organization has gone into the banking business and reports indicate that it is proving much of a success. Already the deposits are around $30,000,000 and still growing. We may see other unions and crafts follow the example of the engineers and thus run banks of their own. What the outcome may finally be is a matter of speculation at this time, but it is safe to say that it will work a good many changes in the industrial life of the nation if the practice becomes general. At all events it will be a new way of linking labor and capital together.

Gov. Trapp showed sound judgment in selecting Cyrus S. Avery of Tulsa as state highway commissioner, or we have missed our guess. Mr. Avery has ample means of his own, hence the salary that the office carries will be no inducement in shaping his course so as to hold the job. Probably it will mean a financial loss to him to neglect his private business to handle this work, but he is one of the live wires who have put Tulsa on the map and an enthusiastic good road advocate. He has given the subject considerable attention and the state may expect the best results to be had under present conditions.

The commission of experts appointed to consider the German reparation problem is still delving into facts and figures to determine how much the Germans can be expected to pay and how to pay when the sum is once fixed. The commission has already stated that in order to pay much of anything Germany must find a market for her goods in other countries. Just now that is what every other nation is trying to do but the market is not big enough to go around. Too bad the earth is not a few sizes larger so that there would be a market big enough to go around.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson showed a truly commendable spirit in her appeal to the American people not to permit the action of the German embassy in refusing to display its flag at half-mast as a token of regret at the passing of the late president to influence them in the work of contributing to the relief of the suffering German children. The children had no part in the slur and it would indeed be sad if their sufferings should be increased through the blundering stupidity of the officials of their government. This view would be voiced by Wilson himself if his tongue could utter the humanitarian sentiments that animated his nature.

The resignation of Secretary Denby from the Coolidge cabinet marks another casualty in the oil investigation. Denby, like Fall, at first attempted the brazen face and insisted that he had nothing to apologize for and would repeat his action in signing the oil lease if it were to do over. He failed to convince the public and Denby was too great a liability for Coolidge to carry in the face of the present state of public opinion.

The bridge across the Canadian river north of Ada will be ready for use by the first of May, we are informed. This will open a highway for much traffic north and south. It will put Ada on a direct line between Texas and all the cities north and east of here. Ada and all the other towns on the highway ought to be benefitted from the bridge.

Arthur Brisbane complains about the styles in Palm Beach. He must be getting old, for there is many a man who would be tickled to see them. But come to think of it, why does Arthur stay there?

THE DIM PAST AND THE NEAR FUTURE

The Forum of the Press

An Epic of Service.

(Houston Chronicle)

In this day and time when the minds of many people are saturated with selfishness and absorbed in thought of commercialism and gain, it is refreshing as it is encouraging to see one man, who, has for more than thirty years, in wild and almost inaccessible lands, mid ice and snows and storms, consecrate himself to the arduous, dangerous duties of his self-selected and useful task.

Such a man is Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, who will lecture in Houston on February 26 on the theme, "Midst Ice and Snow in Labrador." There is scarcely a more bleak, barren and forbidding realm on the western continent than is the coast of Labrador. Life there in winter is almost unbearably hard.

The resident population is small, and has been practically cut off from civilization for four centuries, and in summer is augmented by something like 20,000 deep sea fishermen, many of whom come from the Maine coast.

A little more than thirty years ago not even the simplest form of medical and surgical aid was available.

Dr. Grenfell in 1892 went to Labrador in a hospital sailing ship to see if a medical and surgical service could be established.

From one small hospital vessel there has grown along about a thousand miles a chain of six hospitals, four nursing stations, two orphanages, some small schools, an industrial work, a seaman's institute, a hospital steamer and a fleet of auxiliary power trawls connected with the various hospital centers.

All communication by water is cut off in winter, and dog teams are resorted to, and the doctors of the International Grenfell association travel over hundreds of miles of wind-swept and icy barrens.

The press has for years eagerly published accounts of Dr. Grenfell's really romantic story. King Edward has conferred high honors on him, Oxford University has given him the honorary M. D. which it has ever bestowed. He has been made a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, Harvard has given him its honorary M. A., Williams its honorary L. D. and Toronto an honorary M. D.

When such a man devotes his life to such a work of service and endures hardship and suffering for the sake of the lowly and humble, he is worthy to have his name graven on the roll of the world's heroes.

Such instances of self sacrifice are rare, but the world is growing better and its conception of social obligation keener and clearer.

Tribesmen Balked at Paying Bills of Chief's Pleasure Trip

LONDON. — Saboza, paramount chief of Swaziland, the African potentate who visited England last year, occupied a palatial residence in the British capital and paid his respects to King George at Buckingham Palace, returned to his home land only to find his coal black tribesmen would not approve their chief's bills for travel and entertainment.

A nine-months drought occurred in Swaziland and the Swazis thought Saboza had caused it. In fear and terror they came through with the money for the chief's debts—and then it rained. Saboza had relented. Now the chiefs planning another European trip.

On days with good winds, a windmill may develop as much as 100 pounds of coal.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

Charles Ray.

Charles Ray, hero of many a film and one of the most popular young screen actors of the day, is making personal appearances in a few cities in connection with the showing of his latest release, "The Courtship of Miles Standish." The picture, as Mr. Ray himself says, "is an historical chronicle, not a correct dramatic story. The intense moments are not properly placed or led up to." At that it is a very interesting story, well screened and acted, and everyone, including the children, should see it for its historical interest. Ray himself is a very lovable John Alden and Enid Bennett a most winsome Priscilla.

Mr. Ray himself is a most likeable young man. Seen at his hotel at Cleveland, O., recently, he told us a little about the making of the picture—how it was screened and what it cost. We hope our readers are not interested in these cost details because we are not and we did not memorize them. We were very much interested in how it was done—in the apparatus that caused the rocking of the boat and the tanks of water that made the waves that drenched our hero, the man he was rescuing from a watery grave, and the seaman.

And Mr. Ray was very earnest and sincere about the historical research work that he had had to do for the picture. He asserted that he thought the time was ripe to put on such a picture and he had enjoyed the part. His next will probably be along the lines of "Scrap Iron," an older release but it has not been titled, the cast chosen, or the place of filming decided upon—whether east or west.

The blanket of snow covering Cleveland interested Charles a good deal and he longed for a "red sled" and a pair of skates. As a boy in Illinois he had skated and he had a yearning to try the steels out again. He had hardly seen snow for years—twice perhaps, in the mountains of California he had glimpsed it, but not in such fascinating quantities. If he had just let his wishes be known from the stage of the theater where he made his speeches I know there would have been innumerable skates and red sleds at his disposal and the proud owners of those chosen would have boasted all their lives of how their things were used by Charles Ray, the picture actor.

He says he is enjoying his appearances and meeting people and thinks it is doing him good, but it has its trying moments too, and does not leave him much free time. And he would like to see his dog—a fox terrier named "Whiskers" who "is so homely he is good-looking and such an interesting character." He showed us the dog's picture. We regretted we could not meet him as well as his master, and sympathized with Mr. Ray when he said he was "homesick to see him."

Jackie Coogan says that he likes his latest picture, "A Boy of Plauders," best of all his pictures, as he had such a good time with the dog, "Teddy," who played Petrashche to his Nello in the Ouida story.

MEN WITH PLENTY OF GOLD REMAIN IN ARCTIC CIRCLE

McGRATH, Alaska. — A dozen men are living within the Arctic Circle on the Koyukuk river, with fortunes ranging from $25,000 to $50,000 in gold each, according to Captain Webb, an old-time prospector, who, after striking "pay," came out this winter on his annual vacation. He said these men had married native women and settled down to enjoy their modest fortunes far from the vagaries of civilization.

They use the parcel post to procure what luxuries their tastes demand. But they seem to have no desire to leave their Polar wilderness.

Only when some prospector makes a final clean-up and turns his dust in at some bank can an estimate be made of the amount of gold being taken from the Arctic creeks. Captain Webb was accompanied by a man who carried four suitcases, each, containing a portion of his clean-up, estimated to total $40,000.

Oklahoma Editor O. K.'s Light Plan

Former Editor of Stewartsville Record Writes Letter to the Journal to Boost for New Light Plan

Tuesday night we received a letter from our old friend, Isaiah Kirby, former publisher of the Stewartsville Record, now publisher of the Boynton Index, Boynton, Oklahoma. He did not write the letter for publication, but as it is so applicable to the local light situation, we are taking the liberty to reproduce it in part in the following:

Boynton, Okla. January 21, 1924

H. C. Dunn, Clarksdale, Mo.

Brother Henry:

I see by the current issue of the Journal that you are to vote on granting a franchise to the North Missouri Power company for an electric light and power franchise. I do not know the North Missouri people, but if they will give Clarksdale the same service that the Oklahoma Gas & Electric company gives Boynton, a thriving town of 1,500 it will be the best thing that your people have had to obtain in many moons. The O. G. & E. people have given the same service to towns in this state no larger than Clarksdale and Osborn and also Muskogee, Oklahoma City and other cities of the state. It will be a boon to your people. I run both my presses by electricity. It costs almost double to operate a gasoline engine besides time wasted in cranking for an hour when it refuses to work. I am not writing you this for publication, but to tell you that it will be worth while to advocate the carrying of the election.

Yours fraternally, Isaiah Kirby.

A REVERSAL OF FORM IN BRITISH GOVERNMENT

AMERICA PURCHASING CENTER FOR TRADERS

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Shifting of the silver center of the world from London to New York is in progress, according to bullion and silver exchange experts, who report that supremacy in the market is slowly, but surely, passing from Great Britain to the United States.

Reduced transportation costs made possible by direct shipments of silver from this country to the Far Eastern nations, the largest consumers of the metal, have brought about the change. Formerly American shipments were made in large volume to London, from where re-shipment was made to the Orient.

Total silver exports from the United States direct to the Far East in 1923 amounted to 85,000,000 ounces as against 69,000,000 ounces in the preceding year, while London shipped only 76,000,000 ounces, of which 15,000,000 were re-shipments from the United States.

Despite the sterling basis of foreign trade with India and China, giving London, with its large trade in silver and silver exchanges, an advantage, the New York market offers the attraction of cheaper shipping charges to the silver buyers.

New York also has been helped by the broadening market in Far Eastern exchanges lessening the risks of sterling, rupee and Shanghai fluctuations. As a result this market is receiving continually increasing silver buying orders.

London's experience of several hundred years and its more extensive facilities for handling speculative transactions, however, will enable it to hold the preponderant silver trading position for some time, experts believe.

At the same time, they assert, the London market is at a disadvantage because it can no longer obtain from continental Europe large quantities of silver coin to be melted down and resold, a process which since 1915 has added 400,000,000 ounces to the exports for India and China.

The United States, on the other hand, is benefited by its own large production, which has been swelled

BRICK DEMAND FOR BRICK FORECASTS PAVING ACTIVITY

(By the Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 18.—A sharp increase in unfilled orders for citrified paving brick, as reported to the U. S. department of commerce, may be taken as an indication of an active street and highway paving season for 1924, in the belief of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers association here.

"Unfilled orders in December jumped to 60,624,000 as against 54,535,000 for November, and this is considered an accurate gauge of the demand for early spring and summer shipments," said a statement from the association. "Stock on hand exceeds the total of unfilled orders. It is interesting to note also that contractors and engineers are assisting in relieving the seasonal aspect for the paving brick industry by asking for winter deliveries."

In the distribution of unfilled orders, Oklahoma leads the list, with Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Illinois following consecutively.

LEAGUE CALLS FOR REPORT ON WHITE SLAVERY IN AMERICA

GENEVA, Feb. 1.—Official notification has been received by the League of Nations that Miss Grace Abbott, of the department of commerce and labor at Washington, has been requested to furnish a report on the traffic in women and children in the United States.

A worldwide investigation of this subject is being undertaken by the league with a view of attaining the total suppression of the so-called white slave traffic.

France Pays for Reconstruction

PARIS.—France had spent, up to December 31st last year, a total of 118,152,000,000 paper francs for the reconstruction of northern France and other accounts which, according to the Versailles treaty, should have been paid by Germany.

France has received from Germany, to offset the about, a total of 244,058,000 gold marks. These figures are official.

MAN HELD FOR MURDER AND ARSON CHARGE

(By the Associated Press)

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn., Feb. 15.—Charles Hawkins, 69, is in jail charged with murder and arson following the finding of the mutilated and charred bodies of his 5-year-old daughter Nancy and his 12-year-old step-daughter Rosa Leedwell in the ashes of his home three miles south of there, which burned to the ground yesterday. The arrest of Hawkins followed an inquest into the deaths of the girls.

When arrested Hawkins had in his possession two insurance policies on the lives of the children for $200 and $300 respectively.

BLOOD impurities are pumped by the heart into the face. That is what causes that grainy appearance, that muddiness, sallowness, pimples, blackheads, acne, red spots, and that impossible "something" which no face cream, massage, or face powder can cover up or beautify! The foundation for a beautiful skin simply is not there, and no face treatment can give it to you. But increase your red-blood-cells, and quickly the ruby tint of purity begins to glow in the cheeks, the complexion becomes Venus-like and immaculate! Try it. It will do it every time. S.S.S. builds the red-blood-cells you need for a beautiful complexion. Begin using S.S.S. at once, and give yourself what you have been working for, for years.

"Come up and have a drink, Andrew," Francis invited.

"I need it," was the half-choked response.

Francis led the way in silence up the two flights of stairs into his sitting room, mixed whisky-and-sodas from the decanter and syphon which stood upon the sideboard, and motioned his friend to an easy-chair. Then he gave form to the thought which had been haunting them both.

"What about our friend, Sir Timothy Brast?" he inquired. "Do you believe now that he was mystifying us?"

Wilmore dabbed his forehead with his handkerchief. It was a chilly evening, but there were drops of perspiration still standing there.

"Francis," he confessed, "it's horrible! I don't think realism like this attracts me. It's horrible! What are we going to do?"

"Nothing for the present," was the brief reply. "If we were to tell our story, we should only be laughed at. What there is to be done falls to my lot."

"Had the police anything to say about it?" Wilmore asked.

"Only a few words," Francis replied. "Shopland has it in hand. A good man but unimaginative. I've come across him in one or two cases lately. You'll find a little bit like this in the papers tomorrow: 'The murder is believed to have been committed by one of the gang of desperadoes who have infested the west-end during the last few months.' You remember the assault at Albany court yard, and the sandbagging in Shepherd market only last week?"

"That seems to let Sir Timothy out," Wilmore remarked.

"There are many motives for crime besides robbery," Francis declared. "Don't be afraid, Andrew, that I am going to turn amateur detective and make the unravelment of this case all the more difficult for Scotland Yard. If I interfere, it will be on a certainty. Andrew, don't think I'm mad, but I've taken up the challenge our great philanthropist friend at me tonight. I've very little interest in who killed this boy, Victor Biddle, or why, but I'm convinced of one thing—Blast knew about it, and if he is posing as a patron of crime on a great scale, sooner or later I shall get him. He may think himself safe, and he may have the courage of Beelzebub—he seems rather that type—but if my presentiment about him comes true, his number's up. I can almost divine the meaning of his breaking in upon our conversation tonight. He needs an enemy—he is thirsting for danger. He has found it."

Wilmore filled his pipe thoughtfully. At the first whiff of tobacco he began to feel more normal.

"After all, Francis," he said, "aren't we a little overstrung tonight? Sir Timothy Brast is no adventurer. He is a prince in the city, a persona grata wherever he chooses to go. He isn't a hanger-on in society. He isn't even dependent upon Bohemia for his entertainment. You can't seriously imagine that a man with his possessions is likely to risk his life and liberty in becoming the inspiration of a band of cutthroats?"

Francis smiled. He, too, had lit his pipe and had thrown himself into his favorite chair. He smiled confidently across at his friend.

"A millionaire with brains," he argued. "Is just the one person in the world likely to weary of all ordinary forms of diversion. I begin to remember things about him already. Haven't you heard about his wonderful parties down at the Walled House?"

Wilmore struck the table by his side with his clenched fist.

"By George, that's it!" he exclaimed. "Who hasn't?"

"I remember Baker talking about one last year," Francis continued. "never any details, but all kinds of mysterious hints—a sort of mixture between a Roman orgy and a chapter from the 'Arabian Nights'—singers from Petrograd, dancers from Africa and fighting men from Chicago."

"The fellow's magnificent, at any rate," Wilmore remarked.

His host smoked furiously for a moment.

"That's the worst of these multi-millionaires," he declared. "They think they can rule the world, traffic in human souls, buy morals, mock at the law. We shall see!"

"Do you know the thing that I found most interesting about him?" Wilmore asked.

"His black opals," the other suggested. "You're by the way of being a collector, aren't you?"

Wilmore shook his head.

"The fact that he is the father of Oliver Hilditch's widow."

Francis sat quite still for a moment. There was a complete change in his expression. He looked like a man who had received a shock.

"I forgot that," he muttered.

Francis met Shopland one morning about a week later, on his way from Clarges street to his chambers in the Temple. The detective raised his hat and would have passed on, but Francis accosted him.

"Any progress, Mr. Shopland?" he inquired.

The detective fingered his small, sandy mustache. He was an insignificant-looking little man, undersized, with thin frame and watery eyes. His mouth, however, was hard, and there were tell-tale little lines at its corners.

"None whatever, I am sorry to say, Mr. Ledsam," he admitted. "At present we are quite in the dark."

"You found the weapon, I hear?" Shopland nodded.

"It was just an ordinary service revolver, dating from the time of the war, exactly like a hundred thousand others. The inquiries we were able to make from it came to nothing."

"Where was it picked up?"

"In the middle of the waste plot of ground next to Soto's. The murderer evidently threw it there the moment he had discharged it. He must have been wearing rubber-soled shoes, for not a soul heard him go."

Francis nodded thoughtfully.

"I wonder," he said, after a slight pause, "whether it ever occurred to you to interview Miss Daisy Hyslop, the young lady who was with Biddle on the night of his murder?"

"I called upon her the day afterward," he detective answered.

"She had nothing to say."

"Nothing whatever."

"Indirectly, of course," Francis continued, "the poor girl was the cause of his death. If she had not insisted upon his going out for a taxicab, the man who was loitering about would probably have never got hold of him."

The detective glanced up furtively at the speaker. He seemed to reflect for a moment.

"I gathered," he said, "in conversation with the commissioner, that Miss Hyslop was a little impatient that night. It seems, however, that she was anxious to get to a ball which was being given down in Kensington."

"There was a ball, was there?" Francis asked.

"Without a doubt," the detective replied. "It was given by a Miss Clara Bultwell. She happens to remember urging Miss Hyslop to come on as early as possible."

They were walking along the Mall now, eastward. The detective, who seemed to have been just a saunterer, had accommodated himself to Francis' destination.

"Let me see, there was nothing stolen from the young man's person, was there?" Francis asked presently.

"Apparently nothing at all, sir."

"And I gather that you have made every possible inquiry as to the young man's relations with his friends?"

"So far as one can learn, sir, they seem to have been perfectly amicable."

"Of course," Francis remarked presently, "this may have been quite a purposeless affair. The deed may have been committed by a man who was practically a lunatic, without any motive or reason whatever."

"Precisely so, sir," the detective agreed.

"But, all the same, I don't think it was."

"Neither do I, sir."

Francis smiled slightly.

"Shopland," he said, "if there is no further external evidence to be collected, I suggest that there is only one person likely to prove of assistance."

"And that one person, sir?"

"Miss Daisy Hyslop."

"The young lady whom I have already seen?"

Francis nodded.

"The young lady whom you have already seen," he assented. "At the same time, Mr. Shopland, we must remember this. If Miss Hyslop has any knowledge of the facts which are behind Mr. Biddle's murder, it is more likely to be to her interest to keep them to herself, than to give them away to the police free gratis and for nothing. Do you follow me?"

"Precisely, sir."

"That being so," Francis continued, "I am going to make a proposition to you for what it is worth. Where were you going when I met you this morning, Shopland?"

"To call upon you to Clarges street, sir."

"What for?"

"I was going to ask you if you would be so kind as to call upon Miss Daisy Hyslop, sir."

Francis smiled.

"Great minds," he murmured. "I will see the young lady this afternoon, Shopland."

The detective raised his hat. They had reached the spot where his companion turned off by the Horse Guards Parade.

"I may hope to hear from you, then, sir?"

"Within the course of a day or two, perhaps earlier," Francis promised.

CHAPTER VI

Armed with a powerful letter of introduction, Francis called on Miss Daisy Hyslop, who received him that afternoon in the sitting room of her little suite at the Milan. Her welcoming smile was plaintive and a little subdued, her manner undeniably gracious. She was dressed in black, a wonderful background for her really gorgeous hair, and her deportment indicated a recent loss.

She avoided his direct questioning for a time, but his cheque book finally loosened her tongue.

"I am afraid you will think that what I have to tell is very insignificant," she confessed. "Victor was one of those boys who always fancied themselves bored. He was bored with polo, bored with motoring, bored with the country and bored with town. Then quite suddenly during the last few weeks he seemed changed. All that he would tell me was that he had found a new interest in life. I don't know what it was but I don't think it was a nice one. He seemed to drop all his old friends, too, and go about with a new set altogether—not a nice set at all. He used to stay out all night, and he quite gave up going to dances and places where he could take me. Once or twice he came here in the afternoon, dead beat, without having been to bed at all, and before he could say half a dozen words he was asleep in my easy-chair. He used to mutter such horrible things that I had to wake him up."

"Was he ever short of money?" Francis asked.

She shook her head.

"Not seriously," she answered. "He was quite well-off, besides what his people allowed him. I was going to have a wonderful settlement as soon as our engagement was announced. However, to go on with what I was telling you, the very night before—it happened—he came in to see me, looking like nothing on earth. He cried like a baby, behaved like a lunatic, and called himself all manner of names. He had had a great deal too much to drink, and I gathered that he had seen something horrible. It was then he asked me to dine with him the next night, and told me that he was going to break altogether with his new friends. Something in connection with them seemed to have given him a terrible fright."

Francis nodded. He had the tact to abandon his curiosity at this precise point.

"The old story," he declared, "bad company and rotten habits. I suppose some one got to know that the young man usually carried a great deal of money about with him."

"It was so foolish of him," she assented eagerly. "I warned him about it so often. The police won't listen to it but I am absolutely certain that he was robbed. I noticed when he paid the bill that he had a great wad of bank-notes which were never discovered afterward."

And with that information Francis had to be satisfied when he took his leave.

CHAPTER VII

It was after leaving Miss Daisy Hyslop's flat that the event to which Francis Ledsam had been looking forward more than anything else in the world, happened. It came about entirely by chance. There were no taxis in the Strand. Francis himself had finished work for the day, and feeling disinclined for his usual rubber of bridge, he strolled homeward along the Mall. At the corner of Green park he came face to face with the woman who for the last few months had scarcely been out of his thoughts. Even in that first moment he realized to his pain that she would have avoided him if she could. They met, however, where the path narrowed, and he left her no chance to avoid him. That curious impulse of conventionality which opens a conversation always with cut and dried banalities, saved them perhaps from a certain amount of embarrassment. Without any conscious suggestion, they found themselves walking side by side.

"I have been wanting to see you very much indeed," he said. "I even went so far as to wonder whether I dared call."

"Why should you?" she asked. "Our acquaintance began and ended in tragedy. There is scarcely any purpose in carrying it further."

He looked at her for a moment before replying. She was wearing black, but scarcely the black of a woman who sorrows. She was still frigidly beautiful, redolent, in all the details of her toilette, of that almost negative perfection which he had learned to expect from her. She suggested to him still that same sense of aloofness from the actualities of life.

"I prefer not to believe that it is ended," he protested. "Have you so many friends that you have no room for one who has never consciously done you any harm?"

"I can quite understand my father intervening," she said. "He poses as being rather a patron of artistically-perpetrated crime. Sue is his favorite author, and I believe that he has exceedingly grim ideas as to quelling and fighting generally. He was in prison once for six months at New Orleans for killing a man who insulted my mother. Nothing in the world would ever have convinced him that he had not done a perfectly legitimate thing."

"I suppose so," she admitted dryly. "You told it very cleverly."

Farmers' Column

By
Myra Merrill

Pontotoc county farmers have the choice of several different kinds of pasture crops, but when it comes to a quick pasture and a good one I am of the opinion that Sudan grass is hard to beat. I have seen quite a bit of it on various farms of the county during the past few years; and if I know anything at all about good pasture this stuff is the real goods. Of course several other sorts are good but I doubt if any can compare with Sudan grass for quick growth.

Speaking of pastures, when it comes to something of a permanent nature, sweet clover is hard to beat. Anything that can hold its own against bermuda grass is some sticker. When I bought my little place two miles south of Ada five years ago I found that the former owner had seeded the hog pasture with clover. It was already set in bermuda and last year the clover was still thriving amid the bermuda. If anything else will do that I have not seen it.

Hogs May Come Back.

(By C. E. McClure)

Wheat is getting off to a late start but has plenty of moisture to last until the spring rains. The excessive fall rains delayed sowing on much of the wheat, and retarded the growth of what was sown early. There will be little wheat pasture unless there is warm weather thru the winter to make the wheat grow.

The corn crop was very short. There is virtually none to market and very little on the farms to feed. Kafir and milo and kindred crops average poor. The early plantings about all washed out. The pollen washed off of part of the later plantings, and some of it was delayed in maturing by the wet weather until the frost cut it short.

The fodder crop was very good, and a large quantity was put up. It will be needed soon to replace the grain.

The broomcorn acreage was large, but the production was poor. Probably 75 percent of the brush was damaged more or less by the rains. An unusually large acreage also was planted to cotton, but the most of it washed out. Where it did come thru it opened unusually well for this altitude, and on account of the price is the most profitable crop we have here this year.

Hogs are disappearing from the country before the short grain crops about as rapidly as the buffalo disappeared before the hunter a half century ago. Stock hogs will be in demand whenever a good grain crop is raised.

Cattle are holding their own bet-

He looked her in the eyes.

"My profession helped me to be a good witness," he said. "As for the gist of my evidence, that was between my conscience and myself."

"Your conscience?" she repeated.

"Are there really men who possess such things?"

"I hope you will discover that for yourself some day," he answered. "Tell me your plans. Where are you living?"

"For the present with my father in Curzon street."

"With Sir Timothy Brast?"

She assented.

"You know him?" she asked indifferently.

"Very slightly," Francis replied. "We talked together, some nights ago, at Soto's restaurant. I am afraid that I did not make a very favorable impression upon him. I gathered, too, that he has somewhat eccentric tastes."

"I do not see a great deal of my father," she said. "We met, a few months ago, for the first time since my marriage, and things have been a little difficult between us—just at first. He really scarcely ever puts in an appearance at Curzon street. I dare say you have heard that he makes a hobby of an amazing country house which he has down the river."

"The Walled House?" he ventured.

She nodded.

"I see you have heard of it. All London, they tell me, gossips about the entertainments there."

"Are they really so wonderful?" he asked.

"I have never been to one," she replied. "As a matter of fact, I have spent scarcely any time in England since my marriage. My husband was fond of traveling."

Notwithstanding the warm spring air he was conscious of a certain chilliness. Her level, indifferent tone seemed to him almost abnormally calm. A horrible realization flashed for a moment in his brain. She was speaking of the man whom she had killed!

"Your father overheard a remark of mine," Francis told her. "I was at Soto's with a friend—Andrew Wilmore, the novelist—and to tell you the truth we were speaking of the shock I experienced when I realized that I had been devoting every effort of which I was capable to saving the life of—"

"shall we say a criminal? Your father heard me say, in rather a flamboyant manner, perhaps, that in future I declared war against all crime and all criminals."

She smiled very faintly, a smile which had in it no single element of joy or humor.

"I can quite understand my father intervening," she said. "He poses as being rather a patron of artistically-perpetrated crime. Sue is his favorite author, and I believe that he has exceedingly grim ideas as to quelling and fighting generally. ter numerically. Except for the better classes of fat cattle, they are selling very cheap. There is not much grain with which to put on the finish that tops the market. Butterfat is high and milk cows are profitable.

The sheepmen who stuck thru the slump in wool prices of a few years ago are getting their reward in better prices for wool and mutton. These sheepmen are not worrying about feed which there is plenty of fodder.

The turkey crop was large and has pulled many families thru what otherwise would have been slim picking. The other poultry has helped out too. This has been another year when the milk cows and the hens have saved many a settler's hide and naturally they are considered with due respect.

Farmers still are selling their accumulations of implements and livestock at a sacrifice to move to town to take a better-paying job. It is inevitable that the tide will eventually turn. When it does, those who return to farming may have to buy their equipment at peak prices.

Fruit Trees Must be Sprayed

Every orchard, regardless of its size or age, should be sprayed once a year to control scale. These little scaly insect pests soon sap the vitality from a tree, making it short-lived and unprofitable. A good orchard cannot be maintained where such pests are present. Scale is comparatively new in this country. It reached us from the Orient a little more than 30 years ago and since that time has spread to almost every portion of the United States. Scale has killed many orchards in Oklahoma and made others worthless.

To get any fruit worthy of the name it has become necessary to use the spray pump on the family orchard, even if it consists of only a few trees. To control the codling moth and certain fungus diseases, spraying should be done in the spring. But the material required to control scale must be applied in winter when the trees are dormant. Otherwise, the foliage would be damaged.

To control scale the standard material used in lime-sulfur solution. This material can be bought on the market in concentrated form. One gallon of commercial concentrated lime-sulfur solution is mixed with 3 gallons of water to form the spray. A thorough application of this material once a year usually will keep an orchard clean, but if it has become very badly infested it might be advisable to spray once during mild weather in winter and again in the spring just before the leaves come out.

Before spraying an old, run-down orchard or tree, it is best to subject to a thorough pruning. All dead and diseased parts should be removed and burned, as well as all the rubbish around the trees and in the orchard. Spraying with lime-sulfur solution should be done in mild weather as freezing temperature at the time of application makes it ineffective. A nozzle which throws a reasonably fine spray should be used. Since the spray material kills the scale by direct contact, the spraying should be thorough enough to cover all parts of the surface of the tree.

Miscible oil also are used at the rate of 1 gallon of the oil to 12 gallons of water to spray for scale. Experiments have not yet determined, however, whether spray is with this material can be continued indefinitely without injury to the trees.

Oklahoma Pasture and Livestock Report.

Oklahoma City, Feb. 18. — The supply of hay and feed on Oklahoma farms on farms on February 1, is about 80 per cent of the amount needed to carry stock through the winter. It is pointed out by Carl H. Robinson, agricultural statistician, division of crop and livestock estimates. At the beginning of winter it appeared that the shortage would be much greater, but the mild weather up to the first of January did a great deal to relieve the situation. The factors leading up to the feed shortage had their beginning last spring when heavy losses of the first hay crop were sustained on account of the wet rainy weather. The second crop was short on account of the summer drought and the third cutting was damaged by rain. Also the corn crop shows one of the lowest yields in the history of the state and it would have been necessary to import large quantities of corn if hogs and other livestock had not been greatly reduced. Not a district in the state will have a surplus of feed this winter.

Wheat pastures as well as other pastures are being grazed very closely and pastures are short in all sections. The condition of "all" pastures on February 1 was 70, compared with 82 on January 1, and 77 on February 1, 1923. Wheat pastures were 67 percent of normal on February 1, being greatly damaged by alternate freezing and thawing. In the northwest and north where freeze damage has been severe the condition of pastures was 64, while the southwest and south, where frost damage was least the condition was 78.

The 12-point crop in pasture condition during the past month has caused a drop of 5 points in the condition of cattle. Due to lack of tough feed, poor pasture and cold weather, cattle are getting thin, however, losses from poverty, exposure, and disease have been very light so far. The number of fat cattle on farms is about 98 per cent of the number on hand last year at this date. — Carl H. Robinson, agricultural statistician.

There is an annual waste of 140,000,000 feet of lumber in the United States because of the public's insistence on buying lumber cut in even lengths.

Many Women Victims of Wild Cat Investments

OKLAHOMA, Cal., Feb. 18.—Bad investments have trapped many women in the United States in the last year. Mrs. George A. Riggs, a bank official and treasurer of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, said in a recent address here.

"In 1922," she added, "$21,000,000 was lost by women in
